While Tenacity celebrates its 10th year of serving Boston’s at-risk youth, we are facing one of our most pressing financial challenges since inception. The economic climate has led us to find ways to reduce our operating budget by 17%, yet we still face the possibility of running a significant deficit. We are working more efficiently than ever to serve our 5,000 Boston students while at the same time reaching out to existing and new donors to provide the necessary support.

Tenacity is excited to be embarking on the largest fundraising opportunity in our ten year history - a challenge to raise a total of $500,000 by August 31, 2009, which will enable us to break even financially.

And how? A very generous anonymous donor will match gifts we receive by August 31 up to a cumulative total of $250,000.

You can imagine the excitement this Double your Gift Challenge Match has stirred! The funds raised will help Tenacity kids continue to achieve better academic outcomes, stay in school and enjoy a lifelong game, tennis. It has already inspired many supporters, “established and new,” generating a wave of vitally important donations to Tenacity!

Take on the Double your Gift Challenge Match by joining other Tenacity supporters in serving Boston’s at-risk youth.

Courier and Champions Cup Give Clinic to Tenacity Students

In February, the Champions Cup Tennis Tournament returned to Boston for a weekend event, kicking off Tenacity’s year-long 10-Year Celebration with a fundraiser hosted by Board member Bill Achtmeyer and his wife Alli. The event drew in many Tenacity supporters who were treated to an elegant evening overlooking Boston Harbor. The event included a special presentation from Monica Carpenter, a Tenacity 8th grader who shared the impact Tenacity has had in her life. (Her story, page 2.) Later in the weekend, the tennis pros participated in a Tenacity Pro-Am Tennis fundraiser at the Boston Athletic Club in South Boston. On hand were this year’s Boston winner Pete Sampras and finalist John McEnroe as well as Jim Courier, Todd Martin, Michael Pernfors and Wayne Bryan. After hosting a tennis clinic with our kids, the champions then played doubles with several Tenacity supporters.

The weekend’s events raised over $90,000 for Tenacity. A big thank you to those who participated.
Tenacity’s After School Excellence Program (ASEP) is now in its tenth year of serving Boston’s middle school kids with our Literacy, Tennis and Life Skills curriculum.

ASEP is an intensive three-year program that requires the commitment of students, their parents and our partner schools.

The journey our students experience includes meeting for 30 weeks during the school year. Tenacity partners with six City of Boston public middle schools including: Jackson Mann and Edison, both in Brighton; McCormack and Frederick Middle School Academy, both in Dorchester; Irving in Roslindale; and Mario Umana Middle School Academy in East Boston. These partners generously keep their doors open after school to welcome their students and our staff for an enriching afternoon of literacy enhancement and life skills workshops. Benefits of conducting the literacy program in the schools are many and include a seamless extended day for the kids and regular assessment meetings with their principals and teachers for our program team.

ASEP also partners with five area tennis facilities: Boston Athletic Club in South Boston; Sportsmen’s Tennis Club in Dorchester; Reggie Lewis Athletic Center in Roxbury; and Harvard University. At the courts, our kids participate in tennis clinics and matches where the emphasis is on exercise and sportsmanship taught by our tennis staff.

Literacy outcomes are carefully measured with pre- and post-testing of all ASEP students. Results provide essential data from which we continually develop and improve our program. We continue to realize a 95% high school graduation rate of students who have completed ASEP. We are proud of the continued success our kids achieve in a city where the drop out rate is near 30%.

This year we are serving 190 middle school students; 94 of whom will graduate 8th grade and attend high school in the fall.

Our ASEP graduates continue their seven-year journey as members of Tenacity’s Alumni Services team which provides ongoing student services including study skills workshops, tutoring and college application assistance. They also become eligible to earn a continuing education scholarship available to Tenacity Alumni.

We are proud of the success our kids achieve and wish to thank our partners, sponsors and donors for their continued generosity.

Meet Monica, a Tenacity 8th grader whose life experience has taken her places most of us only read about. An alcoholic mother, a father so poor they were homeless. Their meals and sleep found only in shelters. Lonely, nowhere to play, no interest in school. Then—a chance to participate in Tenacity. Three years in our after-school literacy program, exercising on a tennis court, and new friendships she can depend on and Monica now has big dreams and tangible goals—like attending a top area high school and pursuing college at Le Cordon Bleu.

Adding to her life experiences, Monica was the key-note speaker at the recent Tenacity fundraiser where many of our major donors gathered to support our ongoing efforts to reach kids like her. She shared her life’s story and made a splash among our many generous supporters.

There are thousands of Boston kids like Monica with similar stories. Tenacity can reach them, many of them, thanks to our donors and the potential impact of the exciting 10-Year Milestone dollar-for-dollar matching gift program.

Tenacity welcomes Gary Phillips as its new ASEP director. In his first five months supervising Tenacity’s acclaimed after-school program, Phillips has used his wealth of experience gained through working in Boston’s inner-city education system to fulfill Tenacity’s mission.

Phillips, a former principal in a K-8th grade Boston school, believes that student engagement is a key element to any after-school program seeking to support students as they become proficient readers and confident members of their community.

“My long-term goal is to build strong partnerships with our Tenacity schools, strengthen student literacy achievement, and prepare our students for a successful high school and college life,” said Phillips.

The Boston Lobsters have named Tenacity Co-Founder and Board member Bud Schultz as this summer’s head coach. Featured players this season include Martina Navratilova, with the season opener at Ferncroft Country Club scheduled for July 6. For more information, visit www.bostonlobsters.com.
In response to the growing interest and demand for Tenacity’s Summer Tennis and Reading Program, several improvements are in store for this summer.

- Welcome our new Tennis Director: Ron Casados
- Expanded Ages—STRP is now available to youngsters age six through age 16.
- Two sessions instead of all day. Kids ages 6—10 can participate from 9—noon on weekdays, reducing overcrowding and providing a more focused approach to tennis and reading.
- ‘Tweens and Teens ages 11—16 can participate from 1—4 pm weekdays, with enhanced city-wide tennis competition and a more challenging literacy program.
- Tailored reading program will better suit ages and reading levels among peers.
- QuickStart Tennis format for beginners.
- Junior staff to receive full week of training prior to start of program
- A voluntary, modest donation from participants will be accepted this summer as a way to improve attendance and supplement the program.
- STRP expects participation to exceed 4,500 at 30 Boston park sites.

Tenacity’s Academic Coordinators have created Literacy Bowl, a fun way for Tenacity students to test their literacy skills with team oriented games. The Literacy Bowl works like a high school quiz bowl, with ASEP teams from all five sites competing against each other. The competition covers vocabulary as well as listening, passage, and sentence comprehension skills. ASEP students compete in various games that challenge a particular skill set. For example, in testing listening comprehension, one member of each team is read a short story. She must then tell everything she remembers of the story to the next team member. This carries on to the last team member who is then responsible for writing down the story in full.

The team with the most accurate portrayal of the story wins that round. The game, commonly referred to as “Telephone,” was a huge hit at our first Literacy Bowl this spring where East Boston beat Harvard 2-1. The kids have found there is plenty of excitement and enjoyment in honing their literacy skills. More matches are underway.

What Boston Kids are Saying about Tenacity’s Summer Program

By Travis Bethea (age 15)

To me, Tenacity is a great experience that everyone should try. It has opened new doors for me, such as feeling free, teaching me to be myself, and helping me to advance to higher levels. I think that Tenacity means setting yourself to higher levels while you achieve your goals. I learned how to better myself and I learned how to be a good sport with the help of my coaches Ali, Steven, Britt, and Azeeb. I think that Tenacity will help me in tremendous ways, such as getting along with people and learning how to work and better myself.

By Satajah Robertson (age 10)

Tenacity is the best camp I went to. Not all the camps I went to are like this one. The instructors are very nice – they’re the best instructors you get. You know how people sometimes think that the instructors only teach us about tennis? All the people that say that are wrong. They play tennis, games, help with reading, play in the park, and more good stuff. Tenacity teaches me to be myself. So the next time you hear someone say Tenacity is only about tennis, tell them what I said.
